

Interview questions asked in an HR interview is to judge if the person would be the best fit for the position being interviewed for and if he would be able to get accustomed with the company's culture. The answers would vary according to the individual's perspective and nature. We need to relate our answers to our life scenarios where we had been trying to prove ourselves and trying to build our career.

1). Introduce yourself

Ans. Keep it brief starting with your full name, education, training and certifications. Specify your technical skills relevant to the position.

Example :

My name is viral jagadishbhai siddhpura . My native place is botad . My education is 12 th pass in commerce 78 % in 2012 . like this type give your full introduction .

2). Why did you choose this language?

Ans. We need to be confident answering this question, and need to specify strongly your interest in the language. Like give answer only in English / hindi .

3). Explain your project.

Ans. Never start explaining your project in terms of admin and customer module. Start with the name, purpose, duration and your role in the project. Then explain the technical tools used and the features you had implemented different from other similar projects.

4). What do you know about our company?

Ans. Do some background work and gather company details before you go for interview through its website. Focus on the technology they work on, their clients, projects and company growth history.

5). What are your strengths?

Ans. Specify your strengths that suit the position and how you could be a great employee. Rather than answering in statements use appropriate adjectives and highlight how you outshine others. Be ready to give justifications if asked.

you can mention one or two strengths that make you a good fit for the job, and provide examples of how you've used them in the workplace. You can also try to back up your answer with measurable results. Here are some tips for answering this question:

1 - I have always been a natural leader. With over ten years of experience in finance and sales, I have exceeded my KPIs every quarter and have been promoted twice in the past five years.

2 - I am very collaborative and have always preferred to work in groups. In the project teams I have directed, members work with a variety of people and are motivated by diverse creative tasks.

6). Specify your weakness?

Ans. Be careful answering this question and try to specify something that will not harm your prospects of getting selected and do inform that you are working on it. For example. You are not that organized managing your things at home and you are dying hard to work on it and have also ensured that you will manage your room on your own.

1 - I can be too critical of myself. A pattern I have noticed throughout my career is that I often feel I could have done more even if, objectively, I have done well. Earlier in my career, this led to burnout and negative self-talk. One solution I have implemented over the last three years is to actively pause and celebrate my achievements.

2 – I am naturally shy. From high school and into my early professional interactions, it prevented me from speaking up. After being a part of a work group that did not meet our strategic goals two quarters in a row, I knew I owed it to my team and myself to confidently share my ideas. I joined an improv acting class. It is fun and has really helped me overcome my shyness. I learned practical skills around leading discussions and sharing diverse perspectives.
